SCAM ALERT (from Which? and others)

...The latest energy scam capitalises on the fact that the government's £400 energy grant has started being rolled out this month. It's a text that asks you to click a link to sign up for the grant. DO NOT RESPOND. You will not receive a genuine text about it as it will be applied to your energy account automatically. As we head into the colder months, please remain vigilant about energy scams. Find out more about them here.

...(from Robin) we all need to "secure" our mobile phone accounts and numbers to prevent criminals "porting" our mobile number onto their phone and so possibly accessing accounts with e.g. Amazon or Ebay etc. by entering the "verification code" sent as an SMS message to a phone cloned

with your mobile number. It's becoming more and more difficult to avoid giving a mobile number when shopping (or shipping, or using the NHS) but to prevent this sort of ID theft it's a good idea to set up a PIN/other security features for your mobile phone account. See <https://blog.dashlane.com/port-out-scam/> for more detail.

...Watch out for phoney Amazon texts asking you to follow a link to secure your account following attempted logins, which is a typical tactic to incite panic. If you click the link it takes you to a convincing fake Amazon website where you're prompted to enter your login details. Here's what to watch out for.

OTHER INFORMATION

...Don't let your stamps* go to waste! Regular Royal Mail stamps will have a barcode on them in the future. ...Thieves are targeting catalytic converters more and more because they contain valuable metals that can be sold for a profit. Cars that are parked in car parks overnight or on driveways or along the street are at higher risk of having their catalytic converter stolen, as they're easily accessible to thieves. Cars that sit higher off the ground are also more likely to be targeted, as it's far easier for thieves to slide underneath your vehicle and remove the part in a matter of seconds. Protect it by marking it with a unique serial number onto your catalytic converter to help you identify it if it is stolen. A window sticker indicating that your catalytic converter has been marked, discourages criminals from targeting your car.
